Traffic snarls through Village

By Laura Halleman

Staff writer

Last week's closure of Broad Street for needed repairs has been public knowledge in Sewickley for some time. What wasn't anticipated, however, was the congestion it would cause to the side streets.

The Broad Street Project began on schedule on May 31 and as the jersey barriers and detour signs went up, so too did the collective blood pressure of motorists finding the quickest way to their destinations.

Kevin Flannery, Sewickley borough manager, said the only "official designated detour route" to and from Route 65 during Broad Street's closure is Walnut Street. With ambulances making their way to the hospital, buses, delivery trucks and other vehicles all convening on Walnut Street, traffic backups and honking horns abound the first week of the detour.

"We expect some initial delays but Walnut Street is the designated detour site that we want people to use," said Flannery.

Some motorists, however, opted for their own detours. Several vehicles traveling north on Beaver Street chose to turn left onto Green Street and left through a parking lot that exits back out onto Walnut Street.

Although some motorists thought this would be a quicker detour it, instead, caused a traffic back up in the parking lot as vehicles waited to turn left from the parking lot onto Walnut Street.

Flannery said those residents who live on the closed portion of Broad Street have been provided parking spaces on Frederick Avenue and, at

Parade, yes fireworks, no for July 4th

By Laura Halleman

Staff writer

Although the annual Fourth of July festivities held in Leetsdale were canceled this year due to lack of funds and volunteers, the Leetsdale Fire Department is ensuring that one traditional event takes place.

Leetsdale Fire Chief Ernest Logan said the fire department is in the process of organizing the annual Fourth of July parade and is calling on all local civic organizations, marching bands, classic cars, street rods and whoever else is interested in participating in the event to contact them.

"There isn't enough time or money to get everything organized but we wanted to make sure the citizens had a parade," said Logan.

Absent will be the fireworks and the carnival, but Logan said the parade they are organizing will be "as close to the parades we've always had in Leetsdale."

For the last 50 years, Leetsdale has held Fourth of July festivities that concluded with a fireworks display put on by Zambelli fireworks. Although Zambelli fireworks agreed to work with the borough and extend the payment deadline for their services, the cost exceeded what had been collected thus far.

Robert George, a Leetsdale resident and volunteer involved in trying to get the event planned after the Leetsdale Community Activities Association (LCAA) disbanded, said only $2,000 was donated

QUAKER VALLEY Friends present service awards

The trustees of the Friends of Quaker Valley Schools presented their 2005 awards for Distinguished Service to seven Quaker Valley School District staff members at a reception at the Edgeworth Club on May 18.

The selection of the awardees was made in conjunction with district administrative personnel and Dr. Joseph Clapper, assistant superintendent of the district.

Trustees Timothy Merrill and David Nimick presented the following staff members with awards, which included checks for $650, in recognition of their distinguished service to/for students in the district.

Their names and those of their nominators are: Paul Bodura, technology education teacher in the Osborne School (Dr. Jeanne Johnson, principal); Karen Cunnard, cafeteria employee at the Osborne School (Mrs. Betsy Klasnick, director of food service); Katina Flaskos, second grade teacher at the Edgeworth School (Mrs. Amy Kern, Principal); Michael Haboush, Spanish teacher at the Middle School (Dr. Kenneth Powell, principal); Christine Kardong, secretary to the superintendent (Dr. R. Gerard Longo, superintendent); Michele O'Farrell, mathematics teacher at the high school (Dr. Heidi Ondek, principal); and Cheryl Savage, educational aide at the Osborne School (Dr. Jeanne Johnson).

"This year has been exceptionally an intense and busy one for all of us, so it's a pleasure to take some time and recognize the excellence and commitment of our employees," Longo said.

"It is because of their efforts that we are able to do our own jobs better."

Friends of Quaker Valley Schools is a not-for-profit organization established in 1978 to encourage greater learning and academic achievement by students and to recognize distinguished achievements of QV teachers and staff.

In Friends' fiscal year ending this June 30, it is expected the trustees will announce that 300 people sent checks to

Cool heads prevail during power outage

By Laura Halleman

Staff Writer

A fallen power line near the Hussey Copper Plant in Leetsdale knocked out power to more than 1,500 Duquesne Light customers throughout Leetsdale, Edgeworth and Sewickley last Thursday.

The power line, located on Washington Street, broke at around 12:45 p.m. and, although some Duquesne Light customers regained power within the hour, the majority were left in the dark for nearly six hours.

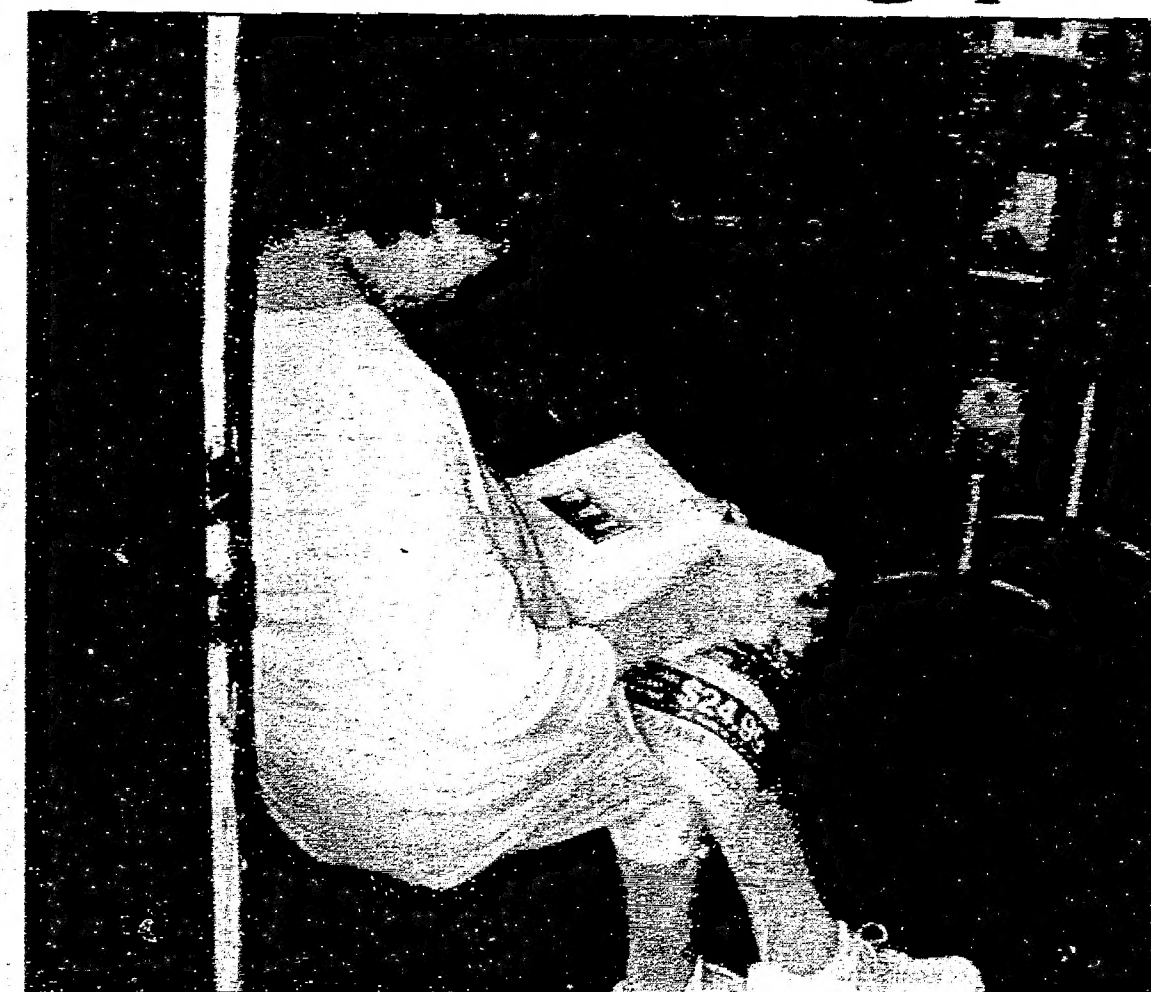

With traffic lights along Route 65 and in the boroughs out, local police departments erected stop signs to remind motorists that the four-way stop was in place.

Along Beaver Street in Sewickley, vehicles took their turn at the intersection of Beaver and Broad streets and politely waved pedestrians on as they stopped at crosswalks.

Although some businesses along Beaver Street closed due to the power outage, many held out as long as they could.

Eva Vaccaro, an employee of the Ultimate Pastry Shop said that frozen blocks of ice were keeping items cool.

Vaccaro said they were just waiting for all of the cake orders to be picked up before they closed up shop and went home.

ROSEMARIE LOMBARDI did some reading by natural light at Open Mind Bookstore.

At Travelwares, owner Paula Morgan said, although the power outage was having a negative impact on business, she was determined to stay open.

"It's affected us a lot," she said. "We've had fewer customers and usually get a lot of customers who stop in to pick up last minute items on their way to the airport that we aren't getting today."

"We aren't able to help them as we normally would."

With flashlights in hand, however, Morgan and her employees were trying to help customers browse as much as possible.

As Rosemarie Lombardi sat just inside the doorway of the Open Mind Bookstore reading a book by way of the sun that filtered in, owner Philip Harris took the lack of electricity in stride.

"One good thing about Open Mind is that we've got plenty of candles and books don't spoil," said Harris, smiling.

Power was restored to all customers by 7 p.m.

No injuries were reported.

Beaver Road landslide cleanup may take months

By Laura Halleman

Staff Writer

It's been nearly five months since heavy rains and flooding caused a landslide along Beaver Road, forcing its closure, and it could be several more before cleanup begins.

Hardy Kern, vice president of Leetsdale Industrial Park, said engineering drawings for the site were completed two days ago and submitted to Leetsdale Borough and Allegheny County Conservation District.

"In my experience the engineering survey could take at least a month to approve and then we can get started," he said.

LIP purchased the 4.4-acre property from the Quaker Valley School District in March at a cost of $45,000. LIP intends to use the hillside dirt for fill dirt at the industrial park that Kern said was necessary to bring the site where three new buildings are planned to be constructed above the 100-year flood plain.

The three new buildings, which will encompass roughly 270,000 square feet, will be leased to light manufacturing and distribution companies. One building is under construction and is set to be finished by October. The other two will be constructed by 2006.

As far as stabilizing the hillside, Kern said plans include a shelf, or flat spot, being cut into the hillside to allow for a safe place for rocks and other debris to fall.

"There will be a whole shelf cut back on the hillside from the bridge at Leet Street to the end of the road at Ambridge," said Kern. "We will also be putting jersey barriers along Beaver Road."

Until then, residents along Beaver Road and motorists who travel it will have had to contend with bus route detours and other inconveniences.

"We can't stop rocks from falling, but we can give them a place to go and make it safer for everyone in the end," said Kern.

DETOURS ARE still necessary on Beaver Road in Leetsdale until engineering drawings are approved by borough council and the county.

In that same time, they have awarded 16 scholarships to seniors valued at $87,700 and have funded a sizeable number of academic achievement awards for students in all four of the district's buildings.

Friends also has added $1,200 to the Principals' Discretionary accounts and they managed all of Friends fund-raising and its operations with the expenditure of less than $2,000 of Friends' money.

It is the trustees' hope that many Quaker Valley residents will contribute generously to their academic excellence awards, teacher/staff recognition awards, and scholarships for seniors going off to college.

Encouraging our children to learn more than they might otherwise do without Friends' incentives is behind the untiring efforts of the trustees.

The Broad Street Project includes adding 14 catch basins. Currently there are only two located on the street.

OSBORNE

Meeting explores upcoming project

By Laura Halleman

Staff writer

Osborne council will hold a public hearing prior to the start of its regular meeting Tuesday, June 21, to allow the public to provide input into the proposed Osborne Elementary School expansion/renovation.

Council President John Hayes said the public hearing is to address any concerns or questions the public may have on the project.

Both Osborne Elementary and Edgeworth Elementary schools are in the midst of construction overhaul proposals to facilitate for an increase in students and renew aging facilities.

Regarding Osborne Elementary School, however, a concern among Osborne Council members is that of traffic congestion on the second highest traveled street in the borough, with Route 65 being the highest.

"Obviously we are concerned," said Hayes.

"The school board wants to make considerable changes to the building and it could have a serious effect on traffic in the area."

The ingress and egress for the school feeds directly onto Beaver Street and along with buses picking up and dropping off students, there are also many parents who do so as well.

Adding to the congestion is the possibility of Osborne Elementary School seeing an increase in kindergarten students.

"The problem with additional Kindergarten classes is that those students are dropped off at different hours of the day which could also lead to traffic problems," said Hayes.

Joseph A. Marrone, Ph.D., director of administrative services for Quaker Valley School District, said the expansion and renovation plans for Osborne Elementary School are similar to those of Edgeworth Elementary renovations.

"The colors are similar that will be used and there will be more green space involved with a possible park located near the building," said Marrone.

Under the site plan proposal, building area of the school will increase from 61,710 square feet to 92,310 square feet.

According to Marrone, a 49 percent increase in students is expected for the coming school year. Marrone admitted that at certain times of the day there is more traffic in the school zone along Beaver Street, but said the traffic study does not show this to be a problem.

Built in 1973, Osborne Elementary School currently has a student population of 398. Funding for the $4.4 million project is through a 2004 bond issue.

Renovations and upgrades to the school include enlarged art and foreign language classrooms, new classrooms for special education and a separate library.

Although it still awaiting final approval, new construction on the school is slated to begin in May 2006 and completed by July 2007.

Students will be relocated to Anthony Wayne Elementary School in Ambridge for the 2006-2007 school year during the construction period.

Edgeworth students will have already spent a year there.

HARRISBURG

Road renaming in the works

State Rep. Mark Mustio has introduced legislation (House Bill 1581) to rename a portion of State Route 65 near Leetsdale in memory of Allegheny County District Justice James E. Russo who died in April 2004.

If enacted, House Bill 1581 would authorize the Department of Transportation to place and maintain signs reading "James E. Russo Highway" at each end of the designated area.

"District Justice Russo's fair decisions positively impacted the lives of individuals in both Allegheny County and across the commonwealth," said Mustio.

"The James E. Russo Highway would be a fitting tribute to a man who did so much for so many."

Russo served as an Allegheny County District Justice for 29 years and was the first non-attorney to serve as president judge of the Pennsylvania Court of Judicial Discipline.

Protecting judges a legitimate concern

Newspapers, including this one, are usually among the staunchest supporters of clear and easy access to public information.

Many have gone to court to protect that access, and virtually all have backed legislation designed to compel public officials to grant it.

But there are times, though infrequent, when limiting access to certain public records makes perfect sense.

Such was the case last week, when Allegheny County chief executive Dan Onorato decided to remove the names of more than 100 judges from the county's real estate Web site.

As a result, it is no longer possible to search for judges' property information, by name, over the Internet, though such a search can still be done in person at the county's property assessment office.

The reason was simple — to protect the safety of the judges and their families.

Even under the best of circumstances, judges, by the very nature of their jobs, can find themselves in perilous situations.

One need look no further than the recent murder of a federal judge's family in Chicago or the courthouse shooting in Atlanta to know how true that can be.

The Chicago case was especially troubling, as the murders happened away from the courtroom, at the home of judge Joan Lefkow. And they were apparently committed by a suspect who was upset because Lefkow had ruled against him in a medical malpractice case.

There has been no definite word about how the suspect, who later took his own life, acquired the judge's address, but the unfortunate truth of the matter is that, had the judge lived in Allegheny County prior to last week, it would have been no more difficult than turning on a computer and logging onto the Internet.

Onorato's decision last week in no way denies access to the judges' property information. It simply makes the process of obtaining that information a little more involved, hopefully deterring those who would seek it with evil intentions.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

THE SAFTNERS' home on Thorne Street was the meeting place for lots of friends after this year's Memorial Day parade.

Resident wants to cheer marchers

Dear Editor:

As Monday morning approached, my husband and I hurried to prepare for our annual Memorial Day Parade Picnic.

Last year, we had a crowd of friends and neighbors from all around join us on our porch to watch the parade. We are one of those lucky villagers whose house is right on the parade route...or so we thought.

You can't imagine my confusion as I drove home from the Giant Eagle with eight dozen donuts to see there were baracades up on all the usual streets but ours.

At around 9:35 a.m., my confusion turned to frustration and dismay as I realized that the parade route had been changed this year! No where was it posted this year. There was nothing in the paper, and no signs were posted around town. Nothing.

As a contributor to the parade, I plead with the committee to return the route to include Peables and the 700 block of Thorne Street.

We promise to have a flag waving, cheerful crowd as the marchers approach the finish line. Gratefully,

History's lessons have meaning today

Dear Editor:
Twelve-million is a big number. As an eighth grader at Quaker Valley Middle School, I have become aware of Holocaust Remembrance Week, May 1-8, we take time to remember the heinous crimes committed by Hitler's Nazi regime against Jews, gypsies and other minorities.

There are already signs that another Holocaust, or something eerily similar to it, is happening right now.

In Africa, reports of mass genocide are becoming harder and harder for governing bodies to downplay, and the public is becoming more and more aware of just how horrible the conditions for some people are over there.

In countries like Rwanda and Sudan, and in areas such as Darfur, people are once again being ruthlessly persecuted and exterminated because of their ethnic background and religion.

And, just as in the days of the Holocaust, we as a country remain as defiantly neutral as ever when faced with these problems.

If we gain nothing else from this week, let us remember what happened 60 years ago, and reconsider our position as a country on how we can prevent it from happening again.

Joseph Franzen

Dear Editor:
We need to remember the Holocaust because of the murder of six million Jews by the Nazis in World War II.

We need to remember the Holocaust because Anne Frank became the symbol of 1.1 million children who were killed during the Holocaust.

We need to remember the Holocaust because of all the children that did survive, having to live without a mother or father for help and guidance.

We need to remember the Holocaust because of the pictures and stories of unnamed victims and survivors printed in books and on the Internet.

We need to remember the Holocaust because of survivors who lost all of their family members and had to live with the thought, "Why them and not me?"

We cannot even imagine what these families went through, having a family member being experimented on for their life, being tortured and killed, and having body parts being used as materials.

It is hard to even think about.

We need to think of how blessed so many of us are, and how we should really appreciate the things that we are bestowed and given in life.

We need to remember the Holocaust so that history does not repeat itself.

Kiwanis Club supports early childhood project

The Kiwanis Club of Sewickley has provided the Early Childhood Project of the Quaker Valley School District with a $550 grant to support the project's Staff Enrichment Workshop on Aug. 27, 2005.

GRANTED

The workshop, sponsored by the Sewickley Public Library, the Laughlin Center and the Quaker Valley School District, is for nursery school teachers, day care providers, kindergarten, first and second grade teachers and support staff.

The goal of the workshop is to present an opportunity for those working in the early childhood arena to discuss "Children Who Don't Fit The Mold" and how their needs can be addressed.

Originated in 2004, the Quaker Valley's Early Childhood Project's goal is to identify and work with families who are not enrolling their children in a preschool program. Educators say that children who do not have the preschool experience are at a disadvantage when they enter kindergarten.

Among the project's activities in 2004-2005 was a series of well-attended fun workshops for parents and their children, regular discussion group sessions on parenting issues and the Early Childhood Forum held in conjunction with the Laughlin Center and the Child Health Association of Sewickley.

The project is directed by Osborne Elementary School kindergarten teacher Betsey Wilson and is supported by a grant from The Child Health Association of Sewickley and the Quaker Valley School District.

AME ZION CHURCH

ST. MATTHEWS opens its doors of faith to all.

Congregation marks 148th anniversary

By Laura Halleman

Staff writer

When Pastor Rosalyne Mitchell-Martin became the pastor of St. Matthews A.M.E. Zion Church a few years ago, she was uncertain of how the congregation would respond.

After all, she would be the first female pastor in the history of the traditional brick church, which sits at the corner of Walnut and Thorn streets in Sewickley.

"I think we've turned a corner. I think they realize that my mission here is more of a servant of God," she says.

"God gives me the mission and I pass on the message and I have always believed that I am not the captain of this ship, I'm just the instrument that God uses to guide this ship."

Change, however, is not something new to St. Matthews A.M.E. Zion Church. Recently having celebrated its 148th anniversary, the church is rich with history of its inception.

Part of an organization that began in 1976 at the John Street United Methodist Church in New York, St. Matthews is Methodist by doctrine. Its roots go back to John Wesley, the founder of Methodism.

During the 1700s, segregation and racial discourse was prevalent in society. Although African American ministers of the church tried to rectify the situation, it continued to be a problem. They then broke off from the church and formed an

The Rev. Mitchell-Martin

African Methodist Church, also known as the Freedom Church.

Mitchell-Martin says the concept of "freedom" in the church's name was to allow the public to know that it was a church for all, not only slaves that had been freed.

In April of 1857, the Rev. Daniel B. Matthews, a pastor from Philadelphia, established a church in Sewickley with only six members. It became the first African American Church in Sewickley and is the oldest one between Pittsburgh and the Ohio state line.

The original church was a simple log structure on Centennial Avenue near Broad Street. In 1868, however, with the assistance of local residents and fundraising efforts, St. Matthews found its new home where it stands today.

At the 148th anniversary celebration, several young men who had moved away from Sewickley returned to speak at the celebration.

"I've met so many young men who have been touched by this church and who came back to tell about it," says Mitchell-Martin. "It has planted seeds in them and they have flourished."

Today St. Matthews A.M.E. Zion Church has 66 members.

"We have an older congregation and a very devout congregation, but the numbers have dwindled over the years. Often younger people leave the area because the cost of living is high. But if it is here, they have it to fall back on."

Mitchell-Martin also believes the name of the church might be a deterrent to those who might have the mindset that the church is strictly for the African American community. This is not the case.

"I am looking at the community in terms of outreach. I think with getting the word out to people that this is a freedom church and is open to everybody that it will help," she says.

Services at the church are Sunday mornings at 11 a.m. All are welcome to attend.

Why Was Family Chiropractic Centers Voted Best Chiropractic Office Two Years in a Row? (2004-2005)

Mrs. Brenda B. is 43 years old. Seventeen years ago she was diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis. Two years later, she came to Family Chiropractic Center, where over the last 15 years through Chiropractic care, Brenda has been able to live an almost normal life. Within a short time of being under care, Brenda noticed many improvements and a significant change in her health. She claims Chiropractic has allowed her to walk, to have less pain, and to have eliminated all of her pain medications. Moreover, Brenda says Chiropractic has made her healthier overall with a greater feeling of "overall well-being." Her energy level is high and she no longer suffers depression, which she says her adjustments have rid her of. She has kept working and is no longer on disability and can stand on her feet "all day." "It has helped just about everything," says Brenda.

Mr. Gene D., a 50 year old male has been a patient at Family Chiropractic Center for the last twelve years. While under Chiropractic care, Gene has seen extraordinary improvement in his ability to walk and in his overall health. Says Gene, "I would not be as active as I am if it weren't for Family Chiropractic Center." Moreover, Gene claims that care received at Family Chiropractic Center has not only alleviated his pain but even improved his ability to "breathe!"

Mr. David H., is a 47-year-old construction worker who does a great deal of lifting and bending. David reports that his ability to maintain his active and heavy workload is entirely attributable to care received at Family Chiropractic Center.

Mr. Richard L., a 55 year old patient was first seen following an accident where he was unable to walk without assistance (he used either a walker or cane) and was forced to take strong pain medications for over a year. After undergoing a program of specific Chiropractic adjustments at Family Chiropractic Centers, he now performs a normal work schedule with no assistance and is easily able to handle some physically demanding aspects of his job and no longer needs any medication.

Ms. Lorie B., is a 41 year old woman who is a dance teacher and registered nurse. She's been a patient at Family Chiropractic Center for 10 years. She first came suffering with back pain and difficulty breathing. "It felt like a knife in my back, I couldn't breathe." Since being under care she reports no back pain, no headaches. Says Lorie "I couldn't function if I didn't get adjustments." Lorie also reports not getting colds and flu anywhere near as often and "no more sinus infections!"

Miss Susan D., a 48-year-old book author reports that she is feeling great and that her Chiropractic care, which began in January 2004, has led to the end of her burps as well as her migraine headaches and acid reflux, which she states she had for years!

College-bound but with a backward glance at home

By Sarah Mills

Herald contributor

It was the middle of May, and throngs of college students who had poured out of Sewickley in late August were trickling back in. Among them were my old acquaintances from high school.

A friend I had not seen in months was home, and we had decided to walk through Pontifract Park, following her dog, whose bushy tail had already disappeared into a gang of elementary-school students on a bird-watching field trip.

As we walked, I peppered her with questions about college life, old classmates and what it was like to be back.

"No one wants to admit it, but I think everyone's really glad to be back here," she said reflectively.

I could imagine no one wanting to admit it.

During my four years at Quaker Valley, the communities here were treated with ever-increasing disdain, from freshman year during which the mention of the word "Sewickley" was enough to elicit a snort of derision; to senior year, when the entire student body would have professed to live in Piedmont, N.D., rather than in Sewickley.

Sewickley was "the bubble," the "WASP-country-club-in-a-borough," the epicenter of absolutely nowhere. My classmates and I disliked its smallness, its dullness and its self-important demeanor.

So it was with some trepidation that I began my gap year last August, waving goodbye to college-bound buddies. On Sept. 1, Sewickley became a ghost town devoid of anyone I knew.

I remember viewing the months ahead with morbid curiosity: Could I survive an entire year? Not just an entire year with those beloved but strange creatures that made up my family, but another year here, in the center of nowhere? It was a depressing prospect.

SARAH MILLS shared her writing talents with Herald readers during an internship this year.

I guess I needn't have worried. I kept myself busy and was blessed with good babysitting clients and the chance to intern at the Sewickley Herald.

I also had the chance (taken out of sheer boredom) to reacquire myself with Sewickley. Since my family has only one car, I spent a lot of my time going around town on foot, giving me ample opportunity to see the place again, from an entirely different angle and slower speed.

In the last year, I have become intimately acquainted with the deposit boxes for my $3 parking ticket fines. I've run almost 2,000 miles on the elliptical machine at the Sewickley Valley YMCA. I've donated about $30 to the Sewickley Public Library in overdue fines, and I've drunk a conservative estimate of 10,932,487,397,365 gallons of Starbucks coffee.

I've traversed the main streets of Sewickley more times than I can count, and to my delight, I have discovered almost all of the tiny sidestreets that crisscross the main roads.

I've seen the Methodist Church Clock Tower from almost every angle, and I've at least been inside most of the little shops in the business district, even the ones where I never purchase anything.

And in this year, I've realized just how much I want to leave. I've also realized just how fortunate I am to have lived here for so much of my life. Like it or not, Sewickley is where my classmates and I have spent much of our formative years, and though no one would say so even under torture, Sewickley is the comfort of home, the quiet, stable community that has always been and will always be sitting by the river.

Given the state of the world today, there are few better places to grow up. Sewickley is safe, peaceful and beautiful.

The age of the place gives it strong roots and a respect for its history. I remember the rage of the community when a 300-year-old tree was cut down last autumn. I enjoy passing by all the old houses, the stately stone walls, the mature trees. I love the fact that many of the communities in the valley have thus far managed to fend off the ugly, soulless suburban look and feel.

I love the strong support behind local businesses, and am impressed that Wal-Mart has yet to defile the landscape.

I love that I can walk into the Ultimate Pastry Shop and still get a cookie for 50 cents and I enjoy digging around in the shelves of the Select Food Market for exotic, fresh food that I couldn't find at a large, corporate grocery chain.

I like the fact that I can smile cheerfully at passersby on the street, and they can smile back and no one will think we're a bunch of recently-escaped lunatics.

Along with many students from Sewickley, I am looking forward to August. I'm leaving for my freshman year of college, and I can't wait.

I don't think anyone dreams of coming back to Sewickley and leading the quiet suburban life, but in a way I suppose we're fortunate our parents did just that. It gave us the chance to experience the stable atmosphere and natural beauty that accompanies life in one of the nation's few remaining small towns.

At the moment I want to travel, be a journalist, be a veterinarian, be the President of the United States, live in exotic places, change the world, and own that little orange Lotus that is parked by Ascot Imported Cars on Walnut Street ... all that stuff that everyone thinks he or she can do at age 19.

Returning to Sewickley is not in the cards. But who knows? I could be back. There are worse places to be.

It could be Piedmont, North Dakota. At any rate, I'm stuck here for now. "I want to go to college right now," I moaned to my mother the other day.

"I know you do, sweetheart," she said, comfortingly. "But you can't right now. It's summer. No one will be there!"

Murray Thaw, 90, steel fabricating industry executive

Murray Thaw, a well respected executive of the steel fabricating industry and activist in local and national Jewish affairs, died at age 90.

As the head of Littell Steel Co., Fallston, for his business acumen and management skills. Throughout the area's steel industry fluctuations, he used intuition and optimism to keep his work force employed and his company viable.

After marrying the former Cecyl Marcus of Pittsburgh in 1946, he formed Littell Steel Co., becoming its treasurer before assuming the office of president in 1953.

In 1977, he was named CEO. Over the years, he worked tirelessly in his community and began a lifelong association with the precursor of the current Heritage Valley Health System, where he was influential in bringing three small local hospitals together to form The Medical Center, Beaver.

As the treasurer of this new complex, he signed the construction management contract that resulted in a new hospital being built.

After he retired from the board of the hospital, he continued his commitment to the center as a board member of the Medical Center Foundation.

His indomitable spirit led him to leadership roles in many of the Jewish organizations where he earned numerous awards along the way.

Mr. Thaw served as Tri-State chairman of the United Jewish Fund and was a board member of the American Jewish Committee and Israel Bonds when, in 1970, he was named "Man of the Year."

Other awards and citations include the UJA Award of Merit, the UJA Leadership Award, the Western Wall Award, the Prime Minister Award, the Israel Solidarity Award and the Tower of David Award.

In recognition of his lifetime of dedication, he was the recipient of the ZOA's Citation of Honor Award in 1994.

Mr. Thaw was affiliated with both Rodef Shalom Congregation of Pittsburgh and the Beth Samuel Jewish Center of Ambridge where he helped establish the congregation, was a principal in its development and served on the board for many years.

The only one to be born in the United States, he was the youngest of one brother and four sisters when he was born in New York City on Jan. 27, 1915.

After receiving his accounting degree at New York University, he received his draft notification while attending a New York Giants game against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Using his fluent German language skills, he spent three years in the U.S. Army Intelligence in Africa, Sicily and Italy, participating in the invasion of South France and finally Germany.

Following his army service, he returned to New York and earned his Certified Public Accountant designation in New York and Pennsylvania, which he maintained throughout his life.

He was a lifelong member of the American Philatelic Society and continued his membership in the American Institute of CPAs, the American Institute of Steel Construction and the Alumni Advisory Boards of New York University.

He is survived by his wife, Cecyl; a son, Robert of Sewickley; two grandchildren, Rachel and Marcus Thaw; and a daughter, Deborah Valera of Los Angeles.

Reflections on self-defense

I didn't know what to expect Saturday afternoon when I walked into the Embassy Suites Hotel in Moon Township. Earlier in the week, I not only committed to covering the Fourth Annual USA Elite Sport Karate-do Training Camp and USA Elite Champions Cup, I vowed to be a participant in a special self-defense training session as well.

Upon my arrival, camp host Sensei (Teacher) Dustin Baldis, of the Pennsylvania Shotokan Karate Club, based in Sewickley, introduced me to Sensei Troy Price, who stands about 5'2", weighs less than 120 pounds and can "de-animate" a man of any size in a matter of seconds with two fingers.

Sensei Price was the self-defense instructor.

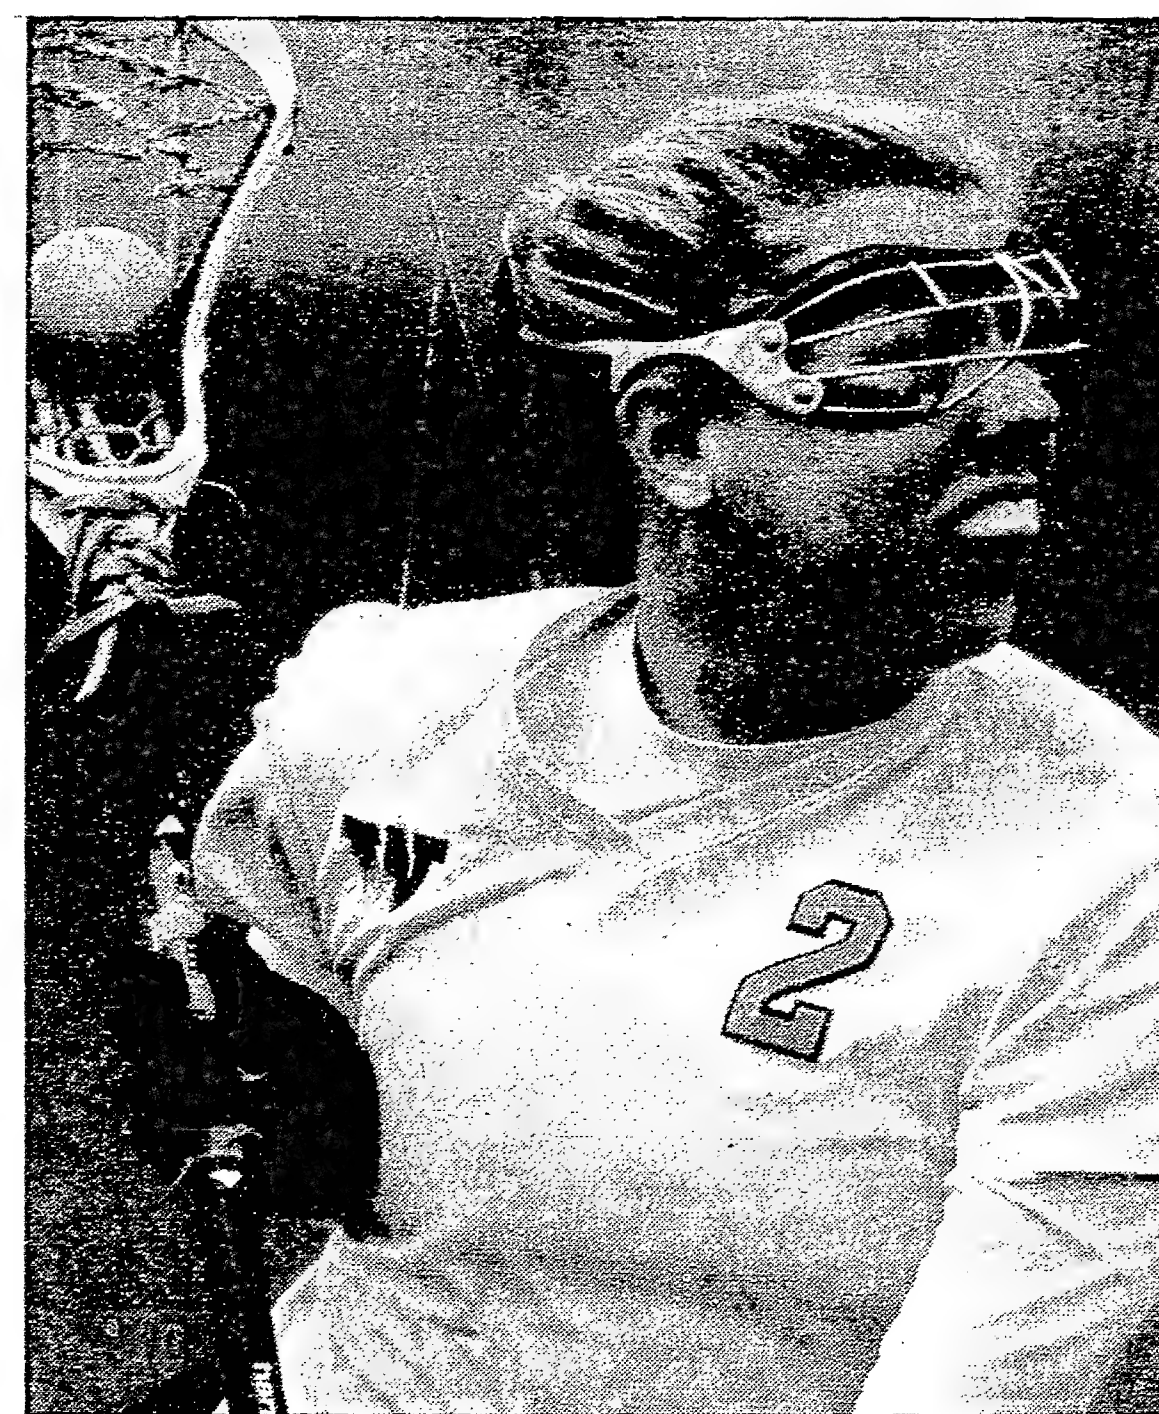

De-animation training, or as he explained it, performing the art of karate against one's opponent until his or her body turns to "jelly" training, is a class he normally reserves for special military units.

"We bring Troy in to [give the camp] a different flavor," Baldis said.

Fortunately, for myself and the rest of the class, which was a mix of people like me, whose knowledge of self-defense is comprised of techniques for warding off the common cold, and others, who seemed to have a general grasp of the concept, Sensei Price glossed over the hard-core stuff and started us off with some fundamentals.

First we learned how to project the proper fighting attitude. Sensei Price called this going SEWICKLEY NATIVES Megan Sward (left), Sewickley Academy graduate and Megan Parris, Quaker Valley graduate, give their best during games this season. They are like long lost cousins, and they never met. Well, maybe they have ... on some long forgotten afternoon on Quaker or Academy turf, extending each other the obligatory passing hand slap and "good game" gesture.

But neither remembers the sentiments. It's uncanny.

First of all, they share the same first name: Megan. They both have blonde hair and similar builds.

They played high school lacrosse in the same area, and both left lasting impressions on their respective schools.

They have one more thing in common. They are both dangerous attack players who have earned several Intercollegiate Womens' Lacrosse Coaches Association and U.S. Lacrosse honors.

Megan Parris, Virginia Wesleyan College senior and Quaker Valley graduate, helped the lady Marlins to a fourth consecutive winning season and was recognized with All-America honors.

She was named to the 16-member Third Team of All-Americans.

This is Parris' second All-America honor. She was named to the All-American Second Team in 2003.

"I was so shocked," Parris said of her success as a sophomore. "It was the proudest moment of my life."

One of her greatest accomplishments that year, she said, was during a game against Catholic University.

Virginia Wesleyan was the underdog. Parris was having a horrible game.

"The coach pulled me aside and said,

"You better get it together," she remembered.

She went on to score two goals to tie the game and send it to overtime.

"I was on fire the rest of the game," she said of her six overtime goals.

As much success as she had early on, there was more to come.

Parris is a two-time All-South honoree, an All-Virginia honoree and the second student-athlete in VWC history to earn all four All-Old Dominion Athletic Conference honors.

She led VWC to a 12-5 season this year with 195 points, the fourth highest in the school's history. She is ranked third nationally with 6.18 points per game and is one of three players in Lady Marlins history to score more than 300 points in her career.

Thought for the Week

It has been said that criticism is the one thing most of us think is more blessed to give than to receive! How true this is! Yet none of us is perfect. So why do we expect and demand perfection from other people? Too many times we are too quick to criticize both our peers and those who are in authority over us. Too many times we find it easy to say what was done wrong - or what should have been done.

If the truth were to be known, we might be surprised were we to know the various pressures and problems that most people operate under. We also might be surprised at how well they have done - and, conversely, at how poorly we might have done were we in their place.

Isn't it true that the call to each of us is not to tear down but to build up and to encourage? Couldn't it be said that destructive criticism is seldom worth considering? Those who know more than you do know better than to criticize; they would rather encourage... and the criticism of those who know less than you do is not worthwhile...

Shotokan Karate Club hosts camp

"gorilla". The way to achieve this is to breathe heavily and rapidly, like a disgruntled gorilla, allow your eyes to bulge out of their sockets and try to telepathically convince the attacker you are more deranged than Ted Bundy and Jerry Falwell combined.

Sensei Price, a 5th Dan Shuri-Ryu Karatedo and Shintoyoshin-Ryu Jiu-Jitsu and 4th Dan US Jiu-Jitsu Federation, was extremely convincing at this. And wanting no part of that, I paired up with a middle-aged woman about half of my height and weight and left a guy named Dave, the class ringer at about 6'4", 230 pounds, to duke it out with Sensei Price.

We learned the first move, which involved twisting out of our opponent's arm-grab while locking his elbow in an unnatural and painful position. I don't know how Dave fared; I was too busy regretting my choice in partner, who, though feminine and petite, apparently has had some formal training.

We practiced this move for several minutes, then Sensei Price taught us another move, which, when compounded with the first, was designed to render the attacker defenseless. It works like this: once the unbalanced attacker's arm is locked up in an excruciating pose, you kick him behind the knee. The idea is to force your opponent to suffer the full weight of his upper body directly on his nose.

Next, Sensei Price introduced us to a move that counters a grab on the shoulder from behind. The idea here is to spin out of your attackers grasp and then make him seriously regret the infraction.

It's a very convincing move and one that requires a demonstration (Sensei Price thoroughly demonstrated each move before hand). Luckily for my fellow classmates, and me, Dave volunteered.

After watching Sensei Price quickly turn the tables on Dave, threaten his life with the two fingers he occasionally uses in lieu of a blade and humiliate him with multiple open-fist slaps to the face before grabbing his throat with his fingers and reducing him to the equivalent lent of a wide-eyed jellyfish, I started to remember an urgent appointment I had to make.

Actually, Dave probably only looked like he was in pain, and Sensei Price did not actually threaten his life (though he did assure him of the possibility).

The idea behind the self-defense class, he explained, is to get away from an attacker as quickly as possible, while leaving him with a sufficient reason not to follow up.

I found the class to be very thorough as it included insight into the anatomy of the body as well as various means of debilitating it.

I excused myself and went into the next room where novice and polished martial arts students were participating in kumite (fighting) competitions. The training camp is geared toward advanced competitors and is designed to prepare students for national qualifiers, explained Baldi, a 5th degree black belt and Western Pennsylvania representative to the USA National Karate Federation.

But the camp does even more.

"There are so many more benefits [to practicing karate] than most people realize," explained Baldi. "The true essence is to learn to avoid fights. It builds discipline, character development, physical conditioning and teaches respect for yourself and others."

Baldi, who competed nationally himself, brings in other nationally ranked instructors to sharpen students' skills before qualifiers begin in mid-July.

Sensei John Fonseca, 2004 World Cup bronze medalist, said attending camps like this gave him the edge to qualify for the USA Team trials.

"The competition is very intense," he said. "A lot of countries have professionals funded by the government or corporate sponsors. The US has amateurs and they are very spread out."

The nationals may be more than an arm's length away for me, but ... getting back to self-defense,

After an afternoon with Sensei Price, I am not necessarily paranoid (as this is not recommended by the master) but I cannot be held responsible if I turn the next person to greet me with a hands-over-the-eyes-from-behind, "Guess who?", into a wincing, whining bag of broken bones.

Sewickley natives excel with collegiate honors

She had 308 points. Parris is also ranked sixth nationally for assists with 2.29 per game.

She tied the VWC record for single-game ground balls with 11 against Guilford College this year.

Megan Sward, College of Wooster junior and Sewickley Academy graduate, was named to the first-team, All-North Coast Athletic Conference Team.

She was also selected to play for the US Lacrosse West All-Regional Second Team (she made first team last year).

Sward, the 2004 NCAC Player of the Year, led Wooster with 49 points this season with 26 goals and 23 assists.

"I wasn't expecting to do so well," Sward said and admittedly almost quit her freshman year. "It was too much. I started half of the games and I wasn't expecting any playing time."

Sward came right out of the gate as a sophomore starter and attributes a lot of her success to "great teammates and coaches."

She was the second leading scorer in the conference and recorded the highest number of draw controls for Wooster with 34. She also had 20 ground balls and caused 16 turnovers.

Sward, who has coached numerous lacrosse camps during the summers, will enter her senior season as the eighth-leading scorer in team history with 158 points.

So how is it that two stellar lacrosse athletes with so much in common do not remember playing against each other in high school?

Parris, a former star soccer player for the Lady Quakers, began playing lacrosse as a high school senior.

She had no former training. "I learned to play my senior year," she said, explaining that her soccer exploits are what helped her get scholarships to VWC.

"I really owe it to dedication," she said of her unexpected success in lacrosse. "It was fun. I really enjoyed it."

"We had a small team with great chemistry and a wonderful coach."

Parris, who has admittedly succumbed to life on the beach and hopes to stay put for a while, said she always felt "stressed" playing soccer, while lacrosse just seemed to come naturally.

"I thought it was fun to go out and play with my friends," she said. "It wasn't stressful."

Despite all of VWC's success, the team faced a lot of adversity this season, Parris said.

However, it benefitted from a strong core of loyal athletes, like Parris, who pulled through.

"Everyone there was focused," she said. "We overcame all of the obstacles and continued to have great chemistry."

Much like VWC, Wooster had its problems this year as well, according to Sward.

"It just fizzled out," she said, noting a slew of injuries. "We didn't win the conference."

Sward suffered an injury herself when the tip of her finger was sliced off.

"I couldn't play well with my left hand," she said. "The other teams exploited that ... and they should have."

But Sward learned long ago not to worry about factors that are not under her control.

"I had a rough start, worrying about what people expected," she explained. "I had to stop worrying and have fun."

Success followed. And with six seniors returning, Sward is confident the team will have a better season next year.

"I'm hoping for a perfect record next year," she said.

As far as her own goals, they are not necessarily comprised of individual honors.

"My goals are not award-based. I don't think that is the right kind of pressure," she said. "I improve where I can and help my teammates and learn from them."

Sward and Parris have yet one more thing in common. Both plan to continue to pursue lacrosse after college, probably as coaches.

And one thing seems certain, between Parris and Sward, the "rivalry that never really was" may have cost each the type of life-long friendship normally reserved for those with even less in common.

QV lineman to represent QV in Penn/Ohio rivalry

Robinson earns defensive lineman position in annual rivalry game

By Jon Paul Creese
Sports editor

At six-foot-three, 260 pounds, Brandon Robinson is a bit shy of an ideal senior lineman.

So in order to meet that ideal, Robinson relied on his speed and agility.

"I need more strength," he admits. "I need to get in [the gym] more."

Probably so, if he intends to take his career further than college. But Robinson has had unprecedented success for one his size on the line over the past few years.

He went All-Conference as a junior defensive and offensive lineman for QV and received an honorable mention last season.

He was also chosen for a defensive line position for the annual Penn/Ohio rivalry game scheduled for June 24.

"It's exciting that I was the only one chosen from QV," he said. "I hope to represent the school well and play hard."

"I want to beat Ohio."

Though Robinson believes he is best suited for the offensive line, he said he appreciates the opportunity and the honor.

"I like to block," he says. "I like to open up holes so the team can score touchdowns."

But it doesn't take long to learn that Robinson's achievement is somewhat soured by years of struggling unsuccessfully to help build Quaker Valley up from the dregs of WPIAL football.

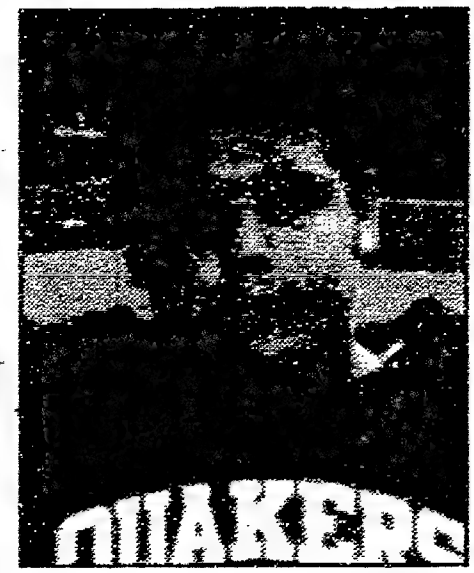

"It's a big accomplishment," but I would trade it for winning any day," Robinson said of QV's two-year losing streak.

He's a team player. That is partly what got him to this point.

"I want to start in any slot," he said of his future with Waynesburg. "I want to work hard and win ... help the team in any way that's needed."

And fortunately for Robinson, he is going on to play for a unified group of athletes.

"I like the players," he said. "They have the right attitude ... they want to win."

"I like the coaching staff too."

That is not to say he lacks faith in the Quakers.

He gives a lot of credit to head coach Art Parker and his staff and believes they are headed in the right direction.

"I think they are going to bounce back this year," he said. "They have some good players. They just need to win a couple of games and break the losing streak."

"They need to put in work during the off season."

Another reason Robinson is successful is that he practices what he preaches. In fact, he never misses a practice and has a strong work ethic.

"You have to be there, working your hardest," he said. "You have to get in there during the off season for conditioning and get ready to go."

"It's all about being there."

Robinson is even more focused on his academic pursuits and noted an interest in working with children someday.

"I took Child Development II and worked with preschoolers, four to five years old, and really enjoyed it," he said.

Being the oldest of five children, Robinson said dealing with kids comes naturally for him.

He has spent many of his high school hours watching over his three younger brothers, Colby, 13, Hunter, 4, and Mack, 3, and his 15-year-old sister, Kristen.

That may seem like too much for a high schooler who gave more than ample time to academics and sports (he also played on the championship QV Basketball Team).

But, like Robinson says, it's all about being there.

REAL ESTATE TODAY

Imagine you've been looking at homes for a month now, seen a wide variety of properties, and you're ready to take action. What's the next step?

Once you've made your decision, you must make a written offer to purchase, a statement of your intentions to buy the home based on certain terms and conditions, at a

What Happens To Your Offer?

Betty Moraca

specified price. Here's how it works.

An "offer to purchase" is a unilateral document that is not binding until accepted by the sellers. You may withdraw your offer at any time prior to written acceptance by the sellers and delivery of the accepted document back to you.

An "offer" defines four primary points: 1) purchase price, 2) terms under which you will make payment, 3) date of possession, and 4) a "closing" date when the transaction will be completed. You may also spell out other terms of your purchase, such as a request for a survey, or requirement that certain repairs be made prior to closing.

Sometimes the offer is not acceptable to the sellers. They may make changes in the offer, and make a "counter-offer", which would then require acceptance by the purchasers.

Once all parties have signed, indicating their accord, the document becomes a binding "agreement of sale." From then on, the agreement is carried out by all parties to reach a successful conclusion. Congratulations are in order!

Betty Moraca is a sales associate for Howard Hanna Real Estate Services, 401 Broad Street, Sewickley. For answers to your questions about real estate, call Betty at 741-2200 Ext. 222. ## DESIGN OF THE WEEK

Blend of features comes together perfectly in Remmington

The neo-traditional Remmington is a two-story country-style home with a contemporary flavor.

Classic keystones accent the graceful arches that crown two wide banks of front-facing windows. A third keystone highlights the smaller arched window centered over the two-car garage.

(An additional third-car garage is inside the next door.)

Classic brick wainscoting skirts the entire front facade, while supporting columns flank and support the arched entry.

Natural light spills into the vaulted entry through sidelights and an arched transom. Double doors on the right open into a room that could be outfitted as a parlor, library, or home office.

The double doors on the left are recessed slightly, and crowned by a high shelf ideal for displaying art or plants. Passing through these doors, you enter the peaceful realm of the master suite.

Luxuries include a roomy walk-in closet, soaking tub, and dual vanity, plus separately enclosed toilet and shower.

Family living areas wrap around from the right side and spread across the entire rear of the first floor, creating plenty of space for entertaining. The spacious family room is at center, open on the right to the dining room and kitchen.

A clean-burning gas stove serves as a focal point, nestled between an entertainment center and another built-in cabinet of about equal size.

This space is bright. High windows let in light on both sides of the Remmington's gas fireplace, while more light washes through wide expanses of glass to the right and left.

Kitchen amenities are abundant, including a pantry, work island, eating bar, and nearby utility room.

Two bedrooms and a bathroom are upstairs, along with a balcony, two storage closets and a huge bonus room.

Perennials offer year-round pleasure to gardeners

Perennials provide year-round color and interest, with endless variations in colors, sizes, habits and time of bloom.

Although some perennials flower for only a few weeks, the ever-changing color display forms much of the excitement of a perennial garden.

Some perennials, such as ferns and hostas, are grown principally for their beautiful foliage. Include foliage plants to extend seasonal color and texture in the garden.

Landscape use

While the traditional English perennial border was entirely made up of herbaceous perennials, they are attractively used in combination with other plants in the total landscape. Perennials are easily used as ground covers, mixed with annuals, grown in containers, and used as accents or specimen plants.

There are perennials for full sun or heavy shade, for dry or wet soil. Select perennials that are suited to the growing conditions where they will be planted.

Select a planting area with good air circulation to help avoid diseases.

Planting perennials

Good soil preparation is extremely important for perennials, since they may be in place for many years.

Deeply spade the beds to a depth of eight to 10 inches. Amend clay soils by mixing in at least 2 inches of pine bark humus, compost, leaf mold or small pea gravel to improve drainage and aeration. Improve water retention in sandy soils by mixing in 2 to 3 inches of pine bark humus, composted leaf mold or peat moss.

Good soil drainage is critical to the success of most perennials. Raised beds can be used to ensure adequate drainage.

Base fertilizer and lime applications on the results of a soil test for best results. In the absence of a soil test, add a complete fertilizer such as 10-10-10 at the rate of 1 pound per 100 square feet of bed area or a complete slow-release fertilizer following label directions.

A pH of 6.0 to 6.5 is ideal for most perennials.

Incorporate lime and fertilizer into the top 4 to 6 inches of soil after mixing in the soil amendments. Rake the soil surface smooth.

Most perennials can be planted in the fall or early spring. Fall planting gives the plant more time to become established before the start of active growth in the spring. Fall-planted perennials are usually well-established before hot weather. Fall planting should be finished at least 6 weeks before hard-freezing weather occurs.

Early spring is also considered a good time to plant perennials. Planting early, just after killing frosts have passed, is better than later spring planting.

Perennials are available grown in containers, field-grown or shipped bare-root and dormant.

— Create great interiors with Southern Pine —

(NAPS)-As history reveals, most popular decorating styles and innovations return for another cycle. Interior wood paneling is one of those products that is making a pleasant comeback.

Nothing beats the warm, inviting look of a natural wood beaded ceiling, wainscoting or wall paneling. Able to dress up any room in the house, the distinctive grain and rich golden color of Southern Pine interior or pattern materials is the ideal choice.

Builders and remodelers around the country are using Southern Pine paneling patterns for many different applications in a variety of decors. Imagine your kitchen, dining room or family room decorated with a beaded ceiling and wainscoting topped with a beautiful chair rail molding. No matter what your taste, Southern Pine-with its wide range of decorating opportunities-can help you create great interiors.

Many consumers like interior patterns because they are easy to install.

Most patterns can be installed horizontally, vertically or even diagonally over gypsum wallboard, painted walls or wallpaper, or nailed directly to wall framing or furring strips.

Southern Pine interior paneling products are available in a wide range of sizes and designs, including double-beaded and V-groove patterns. The 1"x4" double-beaded ceiling material is very popular and is the perfect solution for dressing up a master suite, hallway or living room. Other options, including 6" or 8" beaded patterns, are also available from some manufacturers.

Architects and interior designers prefer long lengths of Southern Pine patterns, typically up to 18 feet, to create seamless, eye-catching ceilings and wall surfaces. For painted surfaces, finger-jointed patterns offer both an economical alternative and efficient use of our wood resources.

The possibilities for enhancing your home or office with Southern Pine interior patterns are virtually unlimited. High-quality Southern Pine offers the dimensional stability and machining properties that custom builders and interior designers need to create innovative interior surroundings.

For more information, contact the Southern Pine Council at Box 641700, Kenner, Louisiana 70064, or visit www.southernpine.com.

Mazda is starting to alert customers to this situation. For instance, Mazda is taking the initiative to remind drivers that applying sunscreen for protection from the sun could be as important as buckling up before stepping on the gas. To drive this point home, the carmaker distributed windshield labels to each of its 700 dealers as part of a new year-round public-awareness campaign with

It's particularly important to remember sun safety when you're driving. It's easy to think of a car as "inside" and thus safe from the sun. However, harmful UV radiation can come through the windows. Even more important is to be careful when you're driving with the top down-you can get film for the windows to filter out damaging ultraviolet light but with the top down you're completely unprotected.

The labels, which will be displayed prominently on all convertibles and sunroof-equipped vehicles, urge drivers to apply sunscreen when dropping their tops. In addition to the MX-5 Miata convertible, Mazda produces five other vehicles offering sunroofs as options, including the rotary-powered RX-8 sports car, Mazda6, Mazda3, MPV and Tribute.

The Skin Cancer Foundation is the only national and international nonprofit organization concerned solely with the world's most common malignancy—cancer of the skin. The Foundation conducts public and medical education programs, and provides support for research to reduce the incidence of skin cancer.
